

Thruston retires, but races go on

As many runners know, especially those who competed in the Thruston summer series events and the many others that James Thruston produced in Dallas, that Thruston has retired. A fixture in road races for almost 35 years, Thruston, 72, said he is retiring for several reasons, which were detailed in Debbie Fetterman's column in the Dallas Morning News. The Snowman Shuffle on Jan. 9 was the final race he produced. However, the series and races have been rescued by Ron Starling and David Hartwig.
