

How about them hats!

Meghan Burcie and Lance Uppercut wear their special prizes for overall winners at the second annual Cowboy Capital 5K Stampede in Stephenville, Saturday July 29. The Serratelli hats were valued at about $120, race director Coke Beatty said.

The event attracted about 120 entrants, but if the hats are awarded again next year, there's just no tellin' who might mosey up to the starting line so they can ride off into the sunset with a very nice hat.

It's one of few events that has something out of the ordinary for winners. Another that comes to mind is the Haltom Stampede 5K and 10K where age-group winners take home nice ceramic Buffalos. Most of the races that Lewis George produces or directs give a different type of trophy. And the Arlington Winter Run always was known for its ceramic penguins. Do you know of a race that gives an out-of-the-ordinary award? Let me know via e-mail.
